KNOW THE WEATHER

When is the hurricane season? Why do hurricanes assail the east coast almost exclusively? Has the main track of these tropical-bred storms been changing course in recent years?

Hurricanes are probably beginning in late summer — but some times brew in mid-summer. They are unlikely after November. Those massive low - pressure circular storms usually originate in the Gulf of Mexico or Caribbean—in this part of the world.

They move to the north and finally to the northeast and blow them-selves out in the higher latitudes. Because they almost always drift to the east, in the end, and do not originate over Mexico or seldom off Mexico's west coast, the western to expecience them. not have to expecience them.

Upper midle states, such as Wisconsin, Michigan and Minnesota, are protected by their geographicel position and the distance of land between them and te Gulf. Hurricanes somehow wear themselves out over long stretches of land.

It's true these storms seem to be moving northward in recent years, though it is too early to determine whether this trend will continue. They are most dangerous along the coast where they can push masses of ocean water over the shoreline and this — with better tinn 100 mile- an- hour winds often accompanying them can produce a major disaster. A storm is said to be hurricane when its winds exceed 75 m. p. h.
